1 of clay, and a string of tallow candles at the coat button, completed the outfit, in which I cut a figure that would have defied my nearest friends to recognize. Rigged out in this style, one could safely bid defiance even to the lynx eyes of Marshal Craw, if he were in pursuit with a warrant.

A miner—a most intelligent and attentive man, named Edward Richards—was selected as my guide, and about two o'clock in the afternoon I followed my trusty Cognishman down the narrow perpendicular ladder that led from the sweet light of the day to the gloomy darkness of the cavernous s' ades below. Down, down, over these narrow and slippery ladders, lashed to the perpendicular sides of the shaft, where sometimes the plunger of the pumps, and sometimes the chains of the ascending and descending "kibbles" of rock, creaked and groaned on the other side of the roughly boarded partition that divided the shaft in two parts. At times, taking the candles from our hats, we passed with stooping heads and cautious steps along the "levels" to another ladder way, leading to the levels below. At the XXX level we came on Mr. Hurlburt and Capt. Francis, taking measurements and surveys for As deer way, leading to the levels below. At the XXX level we came on Mr. Hurburt and Capt. Francis, taking measurements and surveys for opening new works. On parting, they said they were going to the LXXX level, 300 feet lower down, and bantered me to call on them if I came that way. I made the promise, being determined to go to the very bottom of the mine, which lay at the XC, 400 feet below where we stood. In order to try my courage, and at the same time give a correct idea of the internal arrangement of the mine, the guide led the way through the "stopes," or over the "backs" of the lode, instead of through the regular levels. I have been in "subterranean passages" before now, and have traveled over "rough roads," but honestly contess that all previous experience in that line went as nothing. At times the passage ascended, and we climbed over masses of loose rock which were only partially revealed by the dim light of the candles, and then the direction would suddenly change and the descent become almost perpendicular. At one point the inode of progress would be to lie fast on our faces, and thus crawl through the openings that were even them.

would be to lie fist on our faces, and thus crawl through the openings that were even then searcely passable, when the cavity would suddenly expand to the chambers whose roof could not be reached by the lights. At intervals there were open shafts to avoid, and sometimes the path would be on the "string pieces" of the subteranean "tram-ways," across yawning chamser and the surface to lower levels varied the progress.

In some of the levels large masses of copper, several tons in weight, by waiting removal to the surface. In other places huge sheets of copper, of fantastic shapes, depended from the roof, whilst in yet other spots the copper gleamed in minute pots and veins on the listed trap rock. Now and then came the dull boom of an explosion, when the men at some part of the minute was "bluesing a holes" and an interval.

w beauty and works at every ping was happily rendered I into-at length the XI fatiguing climb, we stood once more in the light of day, being immured in darkness, and almost constantly in motion, for five hours. This fact will give some idea of the extent of the mine, which is the largest and deepest in the Lake Superior mineral region. As your correspondent does not profess to be very "plucky" in most hazardous adventures, he may perhaps be allowed to record with becoming modesty, the compliment he overheard paid him by his guide to another miner, that he was "the best traveler underground, for a stranger, that he ever saw, and could go as well and as bold as a miner."

The Mormons and Mormonism In a letter to the New York Tribune, dated at Salt Lake City, July 18, Mr. Gazztar gives the result of his observation, upon the state of things in Utah:

in Utah:

Since my interview with Brigham Young, I have enjoyed opportunities of studying the Mormons in their social or festive and in their devotional assemblies. Of private, social intercourse, that is, intercourse between family and family—I judge that there is comparatively little here; between Mormons and Gentiles or strangers, of course still less. Their religious services are much like those that may be shared or witnessed in the churches of most of our popular sects; the music rather better than you will hear in an average worshipping assemblage in the States; the prayers pertinent and full of unction; the sermons adapted to tastes or needs different from mine. They seemed to me rambling, dogmatic, and ill-digested.

The discourses to which I listened were both intensely and exclusively Mormon. That is, they assumed that the Mormons were God's peculiar, chosen, beloved people, and that all the rest of mankind are out of the ark of safety, and floundering in heathen darkness. I am not edified by this sort of preaching. It reminds me forcibly of the Pharisee's prayer: "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men are—unjust, extortioners," &c. I do not think good men delight in this assumption of an exclusive patent for the grace of God, and I am quite sure it is not well adapted to the transformation of bad men into good. It is too well calculated to puff up its disciples with self-conceit and spiritual pride. That Jesus Christ is about to reappear on the earth in all the pomp and splendor of a mighty conqueror—that he will then proceed to take vengeance on his enemies, mankind in general, whether heathen or nominally Christain, and to glorify his elect (the Latter Day Saints or Mormons) were treated by the Tabernacle preachers as propositions too self-evident to need demonmons) were treated by the Tabernacle preachers as propositions too self-evident to need demonstration.

A Descent into the Cepper Mines of Lake Superior.

A correspondent of the Cleveland Herald has descended into the Cliff copper-mine, at Lake Superior, and describes his experiences underground:

Having signified a desire to go below and see the workings adown in the bowels of the earth, I gion appears to me Judaic rather than Christian:

THE ONLY SAFE LOCK FOR HIOTEL rooms, state-rooms, othercoms, othercoms, othercoms, other and charge rooms, state-rooms, other and charge rooms, other and charge rooms, other and charge rooms, state-rooms, other and charge rooms, other and charge course, I had heard the like of this before, but it always seems to me a very gross and wooden perversion of the magnificent imagery whereby the Bible foreshadows great spiritual transformations. But the spirit of the Mormon religion appears to me Judaic rather than Christian; and I readily believe that Heber Kimball, or at any rate one of the great lights of the Church, once said in conversation with a Gentile—"I do pray for my enemies; I pray that they may all go to hell." Neither from the pulpit nor elsewhere have I heard one spontaneous, hearty recognition of the esseniial brotherhood of the entire human race—one generous prayer for the enlightenment and salvation of all mankind. On the other hand, I have been distinctly given to the other hand, I have been distinctly given to understand that my interlocutors expect to sit on thrones and to bear rule in the approaching kingdom of God.

the outlines of the river and forest, as his brush is always, in giving the finishing touches to his plactures of the human face divine.

The bold hunters, three of our most worthy business men, left here by the Lafayette Railroad, taking with them their bont, tent, camp equipage, and provisions, and after trials and versations that are almost sure to attend such expeditions succeeded in launching their bark on the placid bosom of the crooked river. Here they cruised for a week or more, camping at might in the tangled forest that skirts the stream, and killing game to their hearts' content, while are very pleasantly narrated. Now we would pass a broad, deep bayou, the shores lined with wild rece and impenetrable underbrush, in which lay concealed myriads of wildfowl. Again, thick, dark forests would rise up to view, where the white man's foot had never trod, and whose eternal silence was only broken by the hooting of the owl or howl of the distant prairie-wolf; whose pathless solitudes the summer sunbeams had never pierced, and down whose dim and until the following interesting incidents which occur red there, and in which parties from this State were immediately concerned:

A Mr. Rodgers, of Ripley county, Indiana, with his daughter Elizabeth, of about seventeen months, appeared in O.ney last week and applied to Hayward & Kitchell, attorneys, to procure the arrest of a young Mr. Lane, the absconding father of the child, who was said to be in the whose pathless solitudes the summer sunbeams had never pierced, and down whose dim and undiscovered sieles the autumn breeze went wailing like a lost spirit meaning for its parted joys. Then again we would float past a vast and boundless prairie, where the long, dark grass waved fitfully in the wind, amid whose undulating spears no single object appeared to disturb its bewildering monotony; no house, no tree visible for miles. Often George would rise to his feet and strain his vision to catch some faint sign of civilization. Suddenly we would be greeted by the cheerful exclamation of "a house! a house!" "Carelainly," said the Major, "I expect all the ceremony."

"Well, then, Major, I begin by the usual question—do you acknowledge yourself the father of this puppy?"

A roar of laughter burst from the crowd, and the officer threw the candidate for baptism away. A YANKER TRICK.—We remember when we were living down east, of a neighboring farmer hiring a joily Irishman, who was very fond of learning tricks. One day his employer asked him if he wouldn't like to learn a Yankee trick. Bringing him to the end of a brick barn, Johnathan laid his open hand against the wall, remarking:

"Pat, I'll bet the liquor you can't hit my hand."

"It's done," says Pat, making a vicious blow at the palm of the hand but it being quickly withdrawn he succeeded in peeling the skin and flesh from off his kneckles.

"That's a d.—d nasty trick," roared Pat, "but hold on, I'll cheat somebody else."

A few months passed, and Pat's brother came over from Ireland, as green as early peas. They both labored together, but Pst was uneasy till he would learn his brother the Yankee trick?"

"Jim did you ever learn a Yankee trick?"

"Niver."

"Jim did you ever learn a Yankee trick?" Pat, finding himself in the center of a large field, thought it would be a great less of time to go to the barn, and reaching out his open hand,

"Try it now," shricked Pat with laughter, placing the same against his own mouth.

Im prepared for a sockdologer, and bringing his massive "bunch of fives" in loving proximity with Pat's nose and mouth, who pulled away his hand as before, he sent him reeling to the earth, with the loss of four teeth and a large quantity of blood for learning him the Yankee trick."

us, was paying his addresses to a young lady, out near Harlem, pretty stoutly. It seems that each loved pretty dear, but Sam, our friend, didn't hardly suit the old people. When it came that Same began to show signs of ardent love, and in fact she, too, the old lady intimated to the old gentleman the necessity of giving the young New Yorker a hint to go into other quarters—so when he drove up with his own fine team, hitched, knocked and came in, all things seemed right to him. Presently, all at once the father right to him. Presently, all at once the father of the daughter, a shrewd, cunning farmer, walked up to Sam-

"Have you got a good horse, sir?"
"Yes, sir," he replied.
"Have you got a good carriage, too?"
Sam replied in the affirmative, with much

"And have you got a good barn?"
"Yes, sir, I have."
"Then," said the old gentleman, "my wife and myself advise you to get that good borse and that good carriage, into that good barn, as quick as results!"

The hint to go was sufficient. THE LOST SHEER.—A preacher of the Methodist church was traveling in one of the back settlements, and stopped at a cabin where an old lady received him very kindly. After setting provisions before him, she began to question

"Stranger, where mought you be from?"
"Madam, I reside in Shelby county, Kentucky."

"Wall, stranger, hope no offense, but what mought you be a doing way up here?"
"Madam, I am searching for the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

"John, John," shouted the old lady, "come right here this minnit; here's a stranger all the way from Shelby county, Kentucky, a hunting stock, and I'll just bet my life that tangle haired old black ram that's been in our lot since last week is one of his'n."

last summer, when railroad accidents were so no merous, to a lady whose husband was a brake-man, "do you feel worried about Mr. Jones while he is on the cars, in the view of the many accidents that are now daily occurring?"

"No, not at all," replied the contented lady, "for if he is kiled I know I shall be paid for it; because Mr. Williams got $40 for his cow that was run over by the cars a few days since."

AND PREMATURE DEATH.

Young Men, who, by indulging in secret habits, have rained their health, prostrated their nervous system, and impaired their minds, there's yen-dering the same against his own mouth.

I'm prepared for a sockdologer, and bringing his massive "bunch of fives" in loving proximity with Pat's nose and mouth, who pulled away his hand as before, he sent him reeling to the earth, with the loss of four teeth and a large quantity of blood for learning him the Yankee trick."

Doing it up Nice.—An intimate friend of ours, who had his faults about some things as well as is, was paying his addresses to a young lady, out ear Harlem, pretty stoutly. It seems that each tweethers are the property of the property dear, but Sam, our friend, didn't ardly suit the old people. When it came that ame began to show signs of ardent love, and in ict she, too, the old lady intimated to the old onleans, the necessity of the old and large interest of time to secret habits, have rained their nervous system, and impaired the pleasures of married life secret habits, have rained their nervous asystem, and impaired their nervous system, and impaired the life wear, presumed their nervous system, and impaired their nervous
